POETRY.

THE INNER MAN.

Thought is deeper than all speech,
Feeling deeper than all thought;
Souls to souls can never teach
What unto themselves was taught.

We are spirits clad in veils;
Man by man was never seen;
All our deep communion fails
To remove the shadowy screen.
Heart to heart was never known;
Mind with mind did never meet;
We are columns left alone
Of a temple once complete.

Like the stars that gem the sky,
Far apart, though seeming near,
In our light we scattered lie;
All is thus but starlight here.

What is social company
But a babbling summer stream?
What our wise philosophy
But the glancing of a dream?

Only when the sun of love
Melts the scattered stars of thought;
Only when we live above
What the dim-eyed world hath taught;

Only when our souls have fed
By the Fount which gave them birth,
And by inspiration led,
Which they never drew from earth,

We like parted drops of rain
Swelling till they meet and run,
Shall be all ab-orbed again,
Melting, flowing into One.

SELECT TALE.

Mustaches.

Respectfully dedicated to those who have more hair upon the face, than brains in the head.

“His tawney beard was th’ equal grace,
Both of his wisdom and his face.”
HUDIBRAS.

“What’s them are things growin’ out of your upper lip, Mister?” asked a country Yankee, of a coxcomb whom he met the other day.

“Sar,” exclaimed the dandy, fiercely raising his rattle, and bristling up to the interrogator—“what business is that to you, sir?”

“Oh no business of any consequence, to speak on,” replied the Yankee—“I jist axed for information, not bein’ acquainted with them are things?”

“Well sar,” returned the gallant, angrily, “what if you aint acquainted with ‘em? Must a fellow of your cloth have the impudence to question a gentleman of mine?”

“Is that really your cloth, Mister, or is it the tailor’s?” asked the countryman.

“The tailor’s?” exclaimed the coxcomb, fiercely—“what do you mean by that? Do you mean to insinuate that I—S’death! sar, I’ll not—”

“Well, I thought as much,” returned the Yankee, carelessly sticking his hands into his breeches pocket, and standing still before the dandy, “I thought you never intended to pay for them?”

“What’s that to you whether I pay for ‘em or not? Havn’t I a right to manage as I please with my tailor—to pay him or let it alone?”

“Why, Mister that depends very much on what sort of a bargain you made. If your tailor agrees to let you cheat him, why that’s his look out, not mine. But you havn’t told me yet what you called them are things on your upper lip.”

“Sar, you’re an impertinent puppy, sar.”

“So I heard you say. Now father’s got a tarrier dog—but he don’t tarry much, I can tell you—he’ll kill three rats in two seconds—but as I was saying, father, he’s got a tarrier dog, that’s darned rough and hairy about the mouth—but, Lord! he aint a cirenstance to you. He’d cling his tail between his legs and cry ti-ti-ti! and run out of the world without stopping. My gracious!—how like the devil you do look with them are things?”

“Look! why, sar, they are all the go now. There’s no finished gentleman now but what wears moustaches.”

“Mustyehers, do you call ‘em? Well by hoky, they are musty and rusty too. They look very much like the tip end of our dog’s tail when he brushes it on the floor. Faugh! I wouldnt touch ‘em no more than—”

“Touch them sar, if you offer to put a finger on them, I’ll cane you within an inch of your life. I will, sar.”

“What, with that are switch, Mister? I shouldnt mind it no more than I should an oat straw.”

“Well, sir, touch my moustaches and see if you don’t get it.”

“Touch your mustyehers. Why I’d as heve touch two old chaws of tobacco that have jist been spit out. Touch ‘em indeed! Why, Mister, I wouldnt touch ‘em with the tongs. I cant conceive for my life, what should induce any human critter to wear such darned nasty looking things as them?”

“Nasty looking! do you call ‘em? Sar, you have no taste. Nasty looking indeed! Why sar, they are all the admiration of the ladies.”

“Ladies, ha! ha! ha! They must have a queer notion any how. But there are women who are unaccountably fond of puppies and sich like animals; and I’ve seen ‘em fondle and kiss ‘em as if they were human critters. But, Lord! I don’t see how any woman could let her lips come within a gunshot of yourn. Admiration of the ladies?”

“Do you question what I say sar?”

“Why Mister, I don’t know what kind of ladies is in town here, but one thing I can tell you—our country girls would no more let you touch ‘em than they would a toad—they’re very particular what comes in contact with their lips. But, Mister, how in the name of hair and bristles do you go to work to git the vittles into your mouth, with them are things hangin’ over it, like a hedge fence over the side of a ditch. Do you eat meat and sich like? or do you live on spoon vittles?”

“It’s none of your business sar, what I live on. I board at seven dollars a week; and eat what I please sar, and drink what I please.”

“Seven dollars a week! my gracious! we git board and washin’ and all, in the country, for a dollar and fifty cents; but I s’pose they ask you five dollars and a half extra, for them are mustyehers. Faugh! I wouldnt have ‘em at the table for ten dollars.”

“What a fool I am to stand here talking to a man of your cloth.”

Thus saying, the man with the moustaches flourished his dandy switch, wheeled about and walked on. He had gone but a few steps when the Yankee bawled after him—

“Hallow! Mister—don’t you want to buy a currycomb? I’ve got some real fine ones, with teeth on both sides. They are bang up, I can tell you.”

“Curse on your currycombs and you too.”

Don’t swear nor go off in a passion, I mean’t no offence in what I’ve said. But I must declare, you’re the darn’dest ugly looking man in the face I ever did see in all my life.”

The Funeral.

How dreadfully that young man sobs, and yet he does not seem to be one of the family. Do you know whose funeral it is? Is the one who weeps so bitterly a relative?

“No—but he was once in love with the young girl whom he is now following to the grave. He is no relation. Some years ago he courted her—but suddenly fell into habits of intemperance, when her father forbid him to the house. Since then, the poor girl has pined away under an appalling consumption, which has at last carried her to the tomb. The news of her death only, awakened him from his delirium of intoxication. Since then, only three days, he has become a sober man, and voluntarily signed the Temperance Pledge. But, as you see, he’s a mere skeleton, and cannot live long.”

“And is it supposed that she died from love? That is of a broken heart?”

“There can be no doubt of the fact, for before he became addicted to drink, few men could compare with him for beauty of countenance, or grace and symmetry of form. But he had higher qualities than these to recommend him. He had a kind and feeling heart, a noble and cultivated mind, polished manners, and was altogether a ripe scholar. Poor Charles. A better heart never throbbed in a human breast.”

“You interest me much in his fate. How came such a man to fall a victim to intoxication; for I cannot conceive?”

“By resorting to a fashionable hotel in Chestnut street, in company with young men of fashion, members of a club. Nothing is easier than to contract a habit even when that habit leads to death and dishonor.” The funeral now moved, and the two friends walked a mile in the procession to the Cemetery, wrapped in gloomy reflections on the ravages of alcohol.

“It is a sad catastrophe, indeed. How can a man who has thus murdered a girl that loved him better than life, rest in his conscience? It is a hard fate.”

“To judge from his present agony, I should not suppose he enjoyed any rest.” “What age was she?”—“Only eighteen, and an only daughter.” “Alas! alas!”

“What a deadly curse in this vice and its haunts and temples! How can a civilized people tolerate them? One would suppose, a sense of common danger, would combine all good men in society, to discountenance and expel them.” The coffin had now reached the grave. A prayer full of power and pathos, from the attending Clergyman, struck deep emotion into the hearts of all. The reformed inebriate shook like a leaf, as groans and sobs burst from his bosom, while two friends could with difficulty support him. The service for the dead is at last ended. The coffin was lowered through the rattling cords into the grave. A wild scream broke from the inebriate, who dashing off his friends with frantic violence, flung himself into the grave, exclaiming—“Oh! Maria! Maria!” Numbers rushed to his assistance; and with some difficulty his insensible body was drawn from the grave; but all started back with horror, as one of his friends cried out—“Gracious God! he is dead!” “Poor Charles!” said the benevolent Clergyman, “What a lesson you have left for the good hearted, who yield from a desire to please others, to the insidious temptations of the unfeeling libertine, who under the shallow pretext of fashion, allures to perdition, the weak, vain, and good natured.”—Saturday American.

Fun at Midnight.

The joys of wedded life, says Noah, have all never been written of. One of the most delightful incidents in the life of a benedict occurs at midnight, when he is roused from his slumbers by his wife, who strikes two or three blows upon his breast with her elbow.

“Wife, what is the matter?” The lady has drawn a delicate head underneath the blankets, and is shaking like a disturbed quart of calf’s foot jelly. She says, in a smothered, tremulous voice—

“Oh! Thomas, (or John or James) I hear a noise in the hall, and there is certainly somebody in the house.”

“Nonsense, you are mistaken.”

“There, there it is again. You can hear them walk in the parlor. They’re robbing the house. I told you the new servant was a suspicious person.”

The husband has, by the time the last speech is delivered, raised himself ‘bolt upright’ in the bed; pulled off his night cap, and pricked his ears to catch the slightest sound. After he shivers five minutes or so, the wife again says:

“There now, I heard a glass break. Oh, we shall be murdered. Do get your pistols, Thomas.”

The husband is now really alarmed, and gets out of bed. He gropes around carefully; but notwithstanding his caution, falls over a chair, pitches into a washstand, and alights among the watery fragments of the basin. The lady shrieks, and asks her husband if the robbers are in the room. Getting no answer, but a prolonged ‘cuss it,’ she dashes to the window, and cries murder. The husband endeavors to stop her, but the steam is too high for the safety valve. The neighbors are alarmed, and disturbed faces are numerous. The watchman hears murder cried, and, at the earnest entreaty of the lady, breaks the lock of the front door and pushes in. Several of the neighbors follow him with lights, and of a sudden the whole picture is illumined. The poor husband has cut himself upon the basin, and the room is covered with blood.

The wife explains the cause of their alarm and dilemma, and, of course, the watchman is obliged to go off. This official never thinks any more of the matter; but the neighbors never forget it. The poor husband gets the name of a blackguard and a vile brute, and a story goes about that he was caught beating his wife, in a dark room, at midnight, with chairs and a wash basin, she being too kind to tell the truth.

After binding up his wounds, the couple go to bed, and awake in the morning supremely wretched.

Gents, read the article headed Funeral.

Cooking a Husband.

Many of our married lady readers are not aware how a good husband ought to be cooked so as to make a good dish of him. We have lately seen a recipe in an English paper, contributed by one ‘Mary’ which points out the modus operandi of preparing and cooking a husband. Mary states that many good husbands are spoiled in cooking. Some women go about it as though their lords were bladders, and blow them up. Others keep constantly in hot water, while others again freeze them by conjugal coldness. Some smother them in the hottest beds of contention and variance and some keep them in pickle all their lives. These women always serve them up in sauce. Now it cannot be supposed that husbands will be tender and good managed in this way, but they are, on the contrary, quite delicious when preserved. Mary points out her manner thus:—“Get a jar, called the jar of cheerfulness (which by the by all good wives have at hand.) Being placed in it, set him near the fire of conjugal love, let the fire be pretty hot, but especially let it be clear. Above all let the heat be constant and regular. Cover him over with quantities of affection, kindness and subjection. Keep plenty of those things by you, and be very attentive to supply the place of any that may waste by evaporation, or any other cause. Garnish with modest, becoming familiarity, and innocent pleasantry, and if you add kisses or other confectionaries, accompany them with a sufficient secrecy; and it would not be amiss to add a little prudence and moderation.”

The Scold.

Translated from the French.

There were not long since two youths, male and female, who were so affectionately attached, that it appeared to them that they could not live happy without each other, and consequently they soon very honestly became man and wife. During the two first days all was peace and love. But it is always the case with both men and women, that during courtship they keep concealed many little traits and qualities which after marriage soon discover themselves, and the defects of the parties are both mutually known. The husband soon learned that his wife, with all her beauty, possessed also an evil and scorching tongue, which the slightest causes would set in motion. She loved her husband with all her soul; and of this he was sensible; but he was of a choleric disposition, and sometimes replied to his wife’s upbraids in a manner which he was afterwards sorry for. To free himself from home, and while wandering hither and thither in company with friends, he became addicted to the bottle. On his return at evening, after having decided upon the quality of various wines, with swollen eyes and stammering tongue, one may well imagine the reception she gave him. As soon as she heard the key turn in the door, she would station herself at the top of the stairs, and overwhelm him with a torrent of reproaches. He, half stunned with the wine, in his head, after some efforts to retorting in her own style, would sneak off to bed. Finally, the evil increased to such a degree that they saw each other but little, for the drunken husband slept by himself, and sometimes did not even come home all the night, but slept at the tavern. The wife, in despair, went to a 'gifted lady,' and asked advice of her. From this dealer in forbidden knowledge, she obtained a phial of very limpid water, which she said had been brought from beyond the seas by a pilgrim of the greatest virtue and holiness, with the instruction that, when her husband came home, she must immediately fill her mouth with it, taking great care neither to swallow nor spit it out, but keep her mouth closed. The lady thanked her cordially, and then hastened home to await the arrival of her husband, and make trial of the virtues of the water.

At length the husband, with fear and dread, enters the house, and is astonished to find his wife, whose mouth was full of the charmed water, perfectly quiet. He addresses a few words to her, but she says nothing. The husband become pleasant, she says to herself, behold the effects of the charmed water, and is delighted. The husband asks her what has happened; and she acts courteous and looks pleasant, but makes no reply. Peace is soon made between them. The water lasted many days, during which time they lived as harmoniously as doves. The husband went no more abroad, but found happiness at home. But at last the water of the phial was exhausted, and soon again beheld them in the field of domestic strife. The wife again repaired to the 'gifted lady,' but this one said: 'alas! the vase in which I kept the water is broken!' 'What is to be done?' asked the other. 'Hold,' replied the sibil, 'your mouth exactly as if you had the water in it, and your success will be the same.'

Every person similarly situated, is advised to make the experiment. Every sort of water is believed to be equally good, and even without water it is thought the same end may be obtained.

Thrilling Tale.

ILLUSTRATIVE OF INTemperance.

By PROF. GUYROFFSKY.

CHAP. V.

For months Col. B——, raved under the influence of this most infernal maledy. But at length a ray of reason beamed in upon his mind, and he was an altered man—yet appetite with all its powers, all its horrors again goaded him on towards final destruction. With the fear of eternal degradation on the one hand, and the potent longings of a vitiated taste on the other—he stood between two fiercely raging fires both of which seemed ready to devour him.

CHAP. VI.

The struggle was long and violent—but at length virtue triumphed—and appetite was forever brought under the dominion of reason. He heard one of those mighty men before referred to, tell the wonderful story of his wrongs—and of his redemption. He listened to the powerful, the eloquent, the touching appeal, to the slave of the spirit Demon—he resolved to make a trial—and was successful. He now occupies the Temperance rostrum, a noted champion of that cause—to oppose which all his energies, were once exerted. His daughter's husband has been reclaimed—and the fame of his devotedness has spread far and near—such are the evils of Intemperance, such the blessings of Temperance.

For the Cascade Roarer.

Messrs Editors.—In your last paper, some person has published or caused to be published, a statement that a Preacher near Bates' Corners, in Norton, refuses to sign the Temperance Pledge.

We are sorry to see this notice, in your paper for the following reasons. 1st. He is a good citizen, and is strictly a Temperance man. 2nd. When a Distillery was erected near this place, he refused to help raise the building. 3d. He had grain which he refused to sell to the distiller—though he was offered a six pence on a bushel more than Merchants or others would give at the time. 4th. He has taken an active part in circulating a remonstrance against the granting of a Tavern license to retail ardent Spirits. 5th. Notwithstanding he has had his honest scruples in his own mind, whether it was right to use any other means than the Gospel to reform men. Yet we were flattering ourselves that he was coming around right, and would finally become a member of the Temperance Society. 6th. We are sorry to see it published from the fact, that it will have a tendency to prejudice his mind more than ever, against the Temperance Pledge. 7th. If the article was written or caused to be written by any of his neighbors, it was not because they thought he was not a Temperance man.

We are true Washingtonians, but we are lovers of justice, as well as virtue, whether in a Washingtonian or a Christian, and we hope that you will do the man the justice of publishing this article at as early a date as possible.

We should judge that some of our friends at Bates' Corners—have misinterpreted the article referred to in the above communication.

Now we did not make any personal allusions either to his moral character, christian or Temperance principles—or cast any reflections upon the society—but that he is strictly a Temperance man, we still deny. Those that are not with us are against us—and we care not who the man may be, whether Bishop, Deacon or Minister—no matter how many Distilleries he may have refused to raise—no matter how precise he may have been in the disposal of his grain—or how active may have been his exertions in circulating a remonstrance against Tavern Licenses—unless he has identified himself with the cause—and with its friends and its promoters—he should not be acknowledged in the Temperance ranks. His place is not there. These are duties incumbent upon every man—and especially one of his standing—who has the good of community at heart. As well might we think of entering the Royal Army without swearing allegiance to the King. It would be just as proper for a man to claim all the rights, privileges and immunities of the Church, who refuses to identify himself with its interests—and subscribe to its doctrines—as for a man to claim the encomium of a Temperance man—who refuses to subscribe his name to the confession of the Temperance Faith. The idea is equally preposterous—and if a man has made, or is about making up his mind 'to come out right' we have no fear that the pointing out of his past follies will prejudice his mind against so laudable a purpose.

For the Cascade Roarer.

Villainous.

DEAR ROARER.—I wish to call your attention, and the attention of the community to a public nuisance, located upon the Ohio Canal, in the township of Northfield, I believe, which is in the shape of a drunkery, kept by a man named Thompson. One of our Citizens, who is generally industrious, and a good workman, but who is unfortunately addicted to habits of intemperance, visited this hole some three weeks since, being well dressed and getting on a train, and out of money, the miserable tool of this Thompson, a fellow named Gardner, took a pair of good cloth pants, worth some six or eight dollars, for three glasses of whiskey! and replaced them with a miserable, ragged, old pair, so as to make it appear like swapping. It is a common saying that "exchange is no robbery," but if this kind of exchanging don't come mighty near Robbery, then I'm mistaken. It might, perhaps, more appropriately, be called Piracy, as Pirates generally rob and strip their victims, and dash their brains out. Varying perhaps in this particular, that in this case they first deprived him of his senses, and then stripped him.

Please call down such a shower of indignation upon this concern, as shall cause the waters of the Canal, to overflow and wash it and its conductors, beyond the bounds of civilization and oblige.

Yours,

J. E. D.

CASCADE ROARER.

S. A. LANE, & W. T. COGSWELL, EDITORS.

AKRON, Tuesday, June 10, 1845.

Editor turned Doctor.

Most of our readers will recollect that we (the senior) gave an account of being put through a course of lectures, while on a visit to the Medical Institution at Wiloughby last winter, and will perhaps be gratified to learn that we've got into a successful run of practice.

As we were riding in our sulkey a few weeks since, past a small shanty, with the old mare under full headway, our attention was suddenly arrested by a tremendous bellowing of "hilloo! Doctor dear! will you be after hobbling on a minit, jist, an ye please, while I spake till ye?" and as we pulled up and looked around, about as hard a specimen of humanity as you will often find, greeted the eye. "My wife's in a bad way, Doctor, with the dumb ager, and she's sometimes troubled with falling fits, and aint well at all, at all, and I'm after being subject to the same disease, and the childer are all ailing too, and if yer not in too big a hurry, I'd like to have ye stop a bit, and give us yer advice, so I would."

Now, this was rather a novel idea, an editor being mistaken for a doctor, and called upon to examine and prescribe for so difficult and complicated a set of diseases, the first dash; but, being conscious of our scientific abilities, and judging this to be a case that came more appropriately under the jurisdiction of a Water Doctor, than an apothecary or Steam, we determined to try our skill in the healing art.

The interior of this house of sickness was gloomy indeed, a sad picture to contemplate. The wife and mother, lay stretched upon the only miserable bed the hovel contained, rend-red almost wholly insensible by the effects of her peculiar disease; and some half dozen children, from one to ten years old, were wallowing about upon the floor, the most filthy, ragged, squalling looking objects imaginable, and as we looked at them, the kind hearted father, almost overcome by his peculiar grief, observed that, "their mother was sick so much, that the little darses had to go both ragged and dirty." Upon a rickety table near the bed, stood a bottle, that would hold about a quart, containing perhaps half a pint of some kind of fluid, and we enquired what it was.—"That's a bottle of bitters, which good, kind Doctor R— could me to git, made from whuskey, lemon pale, and some other nice things; but I'm after thinking, it does no good at all, at all; especially my darlint wife there, who takes more of it nor I do."

We gravely shook our head; put on a knowing look, felt the pulse, examined the tongue, (or teeth,) and having satisfied ourself, (particularly from the odoriferousness of the breath,) that it was a positive case of the dumb ager, told the man to empty the whuskey bithers upon the ground, rinse out the bottle, and bring it full of pure water; but observed instead of doing so, he took a good swig, and deposited the rest in an old skillet that stood upon a bench beside the house, which accidentally tipped over before he returned from the spring.

Happening to have in our sulkey box, a lump of salt with which to occasionally treat the old mare, and also a piece of Cascade Soap, for washing the saddle galls upon her back, (this being the extent of our stock of medicines,) we brought them into requisition upon this occasion, and when the husband returned, went on to prepare a strong decoction of Salt and Water, and some fifteen or twenty very small pills, from the soap, and told him to give his wife a spoonful of the tincture of Salt-syracusa, (technical, very,) every half hour, and one of the Compound Extract of Soap-s Pills every two hours; take a swallow of the tincture himself three times a day just before eating, until it was all gone—make a strong solution of the Extract of Soap-s with some hot water, and give a thorough external application on himself, wife and children, rubbing it in well, and rinsing off with cold water—take nothing into the stomach (besides the medicine,) except pure water and food until we come again, which directions he promised strictly to obey.

Three days afterwards, happening to pass that way, we had the curiosity to call in, and was astonished at the wonderful effects of our practice. The husband and father met us at the door, and seizing us by the hand, almost shook our arm off, and came near overwhelming us with thanks for having restored him and his family to health in so short a time. The gude wife was able to be about, and appeared cheerful and happy, and (thanks to the lump o' Castile,) such a change had come over the faces of the children, that we could scarcely believe they were the same brood.

After talking with them sometime about their changed prospects, we told them that we could give them a prescription which would forever secure them against any future attacks of the same disease, if they would only adopt it and persevere. They manifested a determination to do just what we said was right. We then drew up a family temperance pledge, explained the nature of it, pointed out plainly that whuskey bithers was the sole cause of all their troubles, and that by abstaining entirely they would be so much more comfortable and happy, that they very cordially signed their names, and those of their children to it, and called upon heaven to witness the act and strengthen them in their resolutions.

It is now some four or five weeks since our professional labors commenced, and as we were passing the house a few days ago, we gave them a call, and saw that pledge, enclosed in a frame and glass hanging over the fire place, and in addition to clean and smiling faces, each of the children had a neat and tidy new rig throughout, and as we gazed upon the change which this short period had wrought in the condition of that family, we felt at our playing the professional had not been in vain.

A Little More and Then.

We came near getting into a bad fix, or perhaps what some would call a good fix, one morning last week, and as it was rather a funny circumstance, will relate it. As we were cutting a swell, in our two wheeled vehicle, astonishing the natives as we passed, we drove up to the door of one of the best Temperance Houses in one of the pleasantest villages in Summit County, and alighting with our back towards the house, was in the act of hitching, when the door opened, and a sweet voice exclaimed, "why brother H—, is that you?" and as we turned our head to ascertain who was speaking, and who was spoken to, discovered that a very beautiful young lady was making towards us with open arms as if to clasp them around our neck; but the moment that she got sight of our nose, she turned precipitately and fled into the house; and we hardly know whether to censure our prophesies for depriving us of an affectionate embrace and kiss—or whether to laud it for averting the awful catastrophe that was about to happen.

The young lady (the Landlords daughter) having a brother absent and seeing some resemblance, as we stood with our back towards her, supposed he had returned, and hence the mistake. But according to the old saying, a mistake is no haystack, though in this instance it came very near being a Roaring good joke.

Great Times.

Friday last was a memorable day. The Circus, Band and Guards, all exhibited themselves—crowds in town—some drunk, some about two sheets in the wind—some sober and steady. Great rush for gingerbread and whuskey—fat living for groceries. About sundown a drunken fight came off (almost) on the corner of Market and Howard Sts. A crowd gathered around—and to the astonishment of every decent man—a lot of white livered specimens put in their best licks to persuade a fellow half sober, to beat a miserable drunken wretch. We should like to have seen the whole of them well soaked with an Engine—and kept in the Stone Boarding House on the hill, thirty days on bread and water—and to top off another fight was perpetrated inside the Circus ring, between one of our citizens and one of the performers, which resulted in the loss of several teeth, a black eye, barked shins—a law suit, and half a night's sleep. Such is the tendency of these travelling catch penny performances. They foster drunkenness, and every other species of crime and immorality, and instead of being patronised, should be refused the privilege of exhibiting their depraved carcasses in our city.

Will the Plain Dealer, please to give us credit for the witticisms taken from our columns?

POTENCY OF PUBLIC OPINION.

The GREAT lady of one of our grog-gites made preparations for giving an extensive party a few days since, and sent cards to some forty or fifty couple, of the "nobility," and was honored with the presence of eight ladies only, and not a single gentleman! O Crackee! Wasn't that too bad though? Did'n't invite us—if she had not only a Gentleman, but perhaps a Scholar mought, have been on hand.

It strikes us, like the kick of a horse, that, as all other means have failed to procure respect, we shall soon find that she will induce her husband (and Pickands says she rules the roost) to give up the grog-selling business, and then perhaps, they'll be taken into the cream of society 'upon trial'

FIRE IN NEW YORK.—By a destructive fire on the 12th ult. in that city, one hundred houses were destroyed—four hundred families were rendered homeless. The loss falls principally upon the poor—as most of the dwellings were insured. The scene on the day after the fire is described as heart rending. Men women and children, destitute of homes furniture clothing and money—were gathered together in groups—deploring their loss—and bemoaning their utter helplessness.

Military Hall.

This spacious room has been leased by the Summit Guards as a place for the company to drill in, and also to rent out for exhibitions concerts &c. and has, it seems, been placed under the entire control of a Liquor seller, to admit who he pleases.

As the Temperance Society has always been accustomed to hold its meetings at this place, and that too, since they have had possession of it, a meeting was appointed for last night, the Sexton rung the bell, called for the key, in order to light up the room, and was very coolly told that it could be had for five dollars a night! A large number of Ladies and Gentlemen came to the Hall, and finding it locked, returned home disappointed. Will the Officers and members of this Public Spirit-ed Company suffer this? We trust not.

We wish those fellows in Granger who circulated the report that we had agreed to publish anything they might please to communicate, by their furnishing us with fifty two new subscribers, would send them along soon, as we need the change.

The Soda, Ice Cream, and other hot weather frisks at T. Clark's, next door to the Checkered Store, and also at Smith and Nevil's nearly opposite, on Howard Street, are such as will very naturally go down, with this people. Each Establishment has a Ladies Saloon attached.

FOREIGN NEWS.—The Great Western brings the intelligence, that the War feeling has wholly subsided—as was suspected at the beginning, it proves to be one of John Bull's apoplectic attacks. There was a decline in Iron—money market was easy; commercial accounts favorable. The slave trade, and right of search question occupy the House of Commons.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER.—We would simply recommend a cold bath, to those who would be water Profs., who outraged their professors a few days since by 18 quarts of beer and a pint of whiskey. Now boys don't you feel a little ashamed.

A handsomely corned grog bruise, bought a paper last week, and wanted us to put him in the Tulch-ca-roarer, cause then he would give us a 'D—d licking.' We reckon it would be a good idea for him to Post up his accounts, and heal the old soars before he attacks our Honors.

Since our Judges have taken a decided stand on the License question, many Tavern keepers, have been canvassing the county, and avoring to obtain signers to their petitions under pretence that they were going to keep a Temperance House. Such chaps are mean enough to steel sheep, and we not only warn our friends to look out where they put their names—but to watch their hen roosts.

OUR NAME.—Since our name was changed there has been a great deal of speculation upon it, and perhaps a little explanation would be satisfactory to a few inquisitive ones. By the older inhabitants of this town it will be recollected that it was formerly called Cascade, and therefore in addition to the Tee-total signification of the name is properly the Akron Roarer.

'The deus are roughly o'er me stealing'—as the tippler said when his goods were going off at a Constable's sale.

TRUE TO LIFE.
A notorious Doggery Keeper, reading the Black List of last week in the Lock 4 slaughter house.

THE ROADS.—A better time to repair the roads never will be found. Though there has been considerable done in this line, much more remains to be done—and we say let it be attended to forthwith.

We have no doubt that on Saturday last, many a poor fellow—after the novelty of somersets, and comic foolishness had subsided, would have been nicely tickled with the fingering of a quarreer.

It is of no use to tell us that a Circus puts cash in circulation, or that it does not take it out of the country—for a certain chip in Hudson who wanted our paper propper bad, could not subscribe for it because the Circus was coming along—and it would take all his money to go to that. Now just think of what that fellow lost by the Circus, will you?

SMITH'S WEEKLY VOLUME.
We have received the first quarterly number of this valuable work—comprising Histories, Biographies and Critical Notices—which in London cost twenty-two dollars, and in this form are here offered for One Dollar. There are 280 quarto pages of a double super-royal sheet in each quarterly part, printed upon new and fine type. It is decidedly the most economical mode of collecting a concentrated library, ever employed. At a much cheaper rate we get such matter as is seldom, if ever, found in the cheap publications of the day. The work can be found at Michener's New Book Store, on Howard St. Where may also be found Leibig's Letters on Chemistry—The Wandering Jew—Harper's Pictorial Bible—Illustrated Shakespeare, and numerous other popular and cheap publications.

SABBATH SCHOOL CELEBRATION.
The different Sabbath Schools of Franklin, Portage County, purpose holding a Sabbath School Celebration on the 4th of July, and earnestly invite all neighboring Schools to participate with them.

The fellow that defaced that centre piece, happened to leave his Card, and is known, and will do well to call upon the proprietor of the building and make reparation.

Our Cuyahoga Falls package, No. 6, is lost entirely. Being sent by private conveyance, it happened to fall into a Liquor Shop before leaving town, and such good care was taken of it, that it cannot be found. We will have to trouble Uncle Sam to do our toteling in a few weeks.

We're getting a little rain about these days, and according to the ideas of an old and venerable friend, the prospect for vegetables is slim, as the tops will grow so fast that they will pull the roots out of the ground.

MARRIED.
In Camden, Tioga County, N. Y., on the 1st inst., by the Rev. Mr. Clark, Mr. David G. Sanford, of Akron, to Miss Amanda C. Pratt, of the former place.
By E. P. Brainerd Esq., at 15 minutes before eight o'clock P. M., on the 26th of May, in a one Horse Buggy on Main Street, Randolph Portage Co., Mr. Edward Sears, to Miss Eliza Hine, Daughter of the late Jonah Hine Esq., both of Randolph.

FOURTH OF JULY, CELEBRATION.

THE Anniversary of the Declaration of Independence will be celebrated by the Washingtonian Temperance Society of Franklin, on the 4th day of July next.—The friends of Temperance in the adjoining Towns are respectfully invited.

The weather permitting, a procession will be formed near the Temperance House of D. L. Rockwell Esq. at 9 o'clock A. M. under the direction of C. P. Edson Esq. and Isaac Russell chief Marshalls. Good speakers have been selected for the occasion. The exercises will be enlivened by the "Glee Club". The exercises of the day to commence at 10 o'clock A. M. precisely, when the declaration of Independence will be read. An oration delivered, Temperance addresses &c.

A dinner will be served up by D. L. Rockwell Esq. at 1 o'clock P. M. Tickets 37 cts. each.

Vegetable Febrifuge,
OR FEVER & AGUE ERADICATOR.
Price—one dollar per bottle.

THAT this medicine is the most certain and effective ever introduced to the public, for the removal of Fever and Ague, emphatically the "Scourge of the West," the concurring testimony of hundreds entered by it, affords the most ample proof. It is composed entirely of vegetable substances, carefully selected and combined according to strict pharmaceutical rules; so that the patient may be sure he is using a remedy, the medical properties of which exist in the highest degree of concentration and activity. The 'Eradicator' has been submitted to the scrutiny of several members of the Faculty, who pronounce it a powerful and safe preparation, that may be used in all cases of that disease, without prejudice to the patient. ROARER'S PET.

MAY.
My dear Madam May! I am sorry to say
That you look rather sickly and pallid,
As if from some hole just under the pole
Your ladyship lately had sallied.
How poets will lie--(that is, all but I!)
When they talk of your being so charming,
If truth may be told, you're so backward
and cold,
That I can't get along with my farming!
I liken your lips to rock maple chips,
Which winter's cold drifts have laid under
You have icicle toes and fingers like those,
And who then can love you, I wonder.

There is nothing in the world worth being a knave for.
It is said there is a man in Connecticut who walks so fast, that he puts his shadow out of breath to keep up with him.

"Sympathy for rumsellers" is now said to be only another title for "love of the critter."

Why is a drunkard's throat like a certain dance? Because it is a horn pipe.

A christian profession saves many a good name in this life, but never a soul in the next.

The editor of the New Orleans Herald says, he had rather "marry a pretty foot than a pretty face." What is this but saying that he had rather have a pretty kick than a pretty kiss?

"I say that's my sentiment, and I'll stand by it," as the spirited politician said, and then tumbled into the gutter.

'My voice is still for war,' as the deaf and dumb man thought when loading his musket in preparation for a fight to secure the territory of Oregon.

Kitchen girls are now termed 'Young Ladies of the other Parlor.' People that go about grinding knives, scissors and razors are termed 'gentlemen of the revolution.' Folks that dig clams are termed--'Profound investigators.'

QUERR DESCRIPTION.--A Western editor says: 'A violent gale has just passed over us and destroyed nearly one half of our beautiful village, and turned a great number of our inhabitants houseless and homeless into the streets--many of the old garrets are filled to suffocation by people with their gable ends out.'

An unfortunate landlord, going round to collect rents, sent his servant forward to prepare his tenants for his visit. On reaching the house and finding his servant taking a survey, and apparently endeavoring to gain an admittance--'What's the matter,' said he, 'is the door bolted?' 'No master,' was the reply, 'but the tenant is.'

THINGS LOST FOREVER.--Lost wealth may be restored by industry--the wreck of health regained by temperance--forgotten knowledge restored by study--alienated friendship smoothed into forgetfulness--even forfeited reputation won back by penitence and virtue. But whoever again looked upon his vanished hours--recalled his slighted years, stamped them with wisdom--or effaced from heaven's record the fearful blot of wasted life?--Mrs. Sigourney.

BEAUTIFUL THOUGHT.--Mrs. Child, in one of her late pleasant fictions, has this truly poetical sentiment--
'Two souls that are sufficient to each other--sentiments, affections, passions, & thoughts, all blending in love's harmony--are earth's most perfect medium of heaven.'

'Through them the angels come and go continually, on missions of love to all the lower forms of creation.'

'It is the halo of these heavenly visitors that veils the earth in such a golden glory and makes every little flower smile its blessings upon lovers.'

M'Kenzie's Tonic Febrifuge

Unrivalled and unequalled for the cure of Fever and Ague, dumb Ague, &c.

Throughout this vast western country, there is no disease so trying to the constitution as the Ague and Fever, in its vari ous forms; no disease so apt to undermine the system with its host of attendant evils, such as Jaundice, Dropsy and Chronic Diseases of the Liver, Spleen, &c. This invaluable medicine has been tested since the year 1837 as a certain and effectual cure for the above mentioned complaints; it will not injure the most delicate constitution, and when taken according to the directions never fails in eradicating this distressing disease from the system.

The proprietors in recommending their Tonic Febrifuge to the public, do so with great confidence, feeling assured that its superior qualities will recommend it to all who are afflicted with those diseases, to give it a trial.
